Dimensions of Culturalisation

Department of Culture Studies (Tema Q)
Report 2007:7, ISBN 978-91-975663-8-4
68 pages

“Culturalisation” denotes a growing number of widespread beliefs that culture is expanding in scope and significance, in the present era of information, experience, media, aesthetics and virtuality. This report scrutinises the implications of such claims, outlines five dimensions of the concept of culture, related to corresponding sets of culturalisation discourses, and presents five focal arenas for these processes: academia, politics, public space, history constructions and cultural border struggles.
